I Recrossed the ocean in midwinter, and before leaving London had made to order by a fashionable tailor a heavy Melton overcoat. It cost sixtécu dollars. In America forty dollars would have been the price. On arriving in New York, I stood on the platform of a Third Avenue surface car and talked with the driver, a wearied-looking man, his face pinched with cold. His overcoat, like Nanki-Poo, was a thing of shreds and patches. He looked at my Melton admiringly. Presently he addressed me: I would like to ask yon, sir, he said, how much yon gave for that coat t Sixtécu dollars. His eyes opened with astonishment. Sixteen dollars! Why, this thing of mine cost eighteen. Tell me, w here did you get your coat? In London. The poor fellow turned to his horses sadly disappointed. Protectionists talk of the...
