The fundamental reason for this deficiency is, perhaps, that, altho there are numerous technical books and magazine articles dealing with such problems, they are written primarily for the engineer and do not provide readily the comparatively simple, yet essential information needed by the shop teacher when it becomes his duty and privilege to plan, install and keep in order school shop equipment. For instance, pupils in many vocational classes should know how to take care of belting properly, how to babbitt a bearing, how to fit circular saws, braze handsaws, etc., and in this sense this book can be used as a text and reference book by the students. Because of the direct method of presenting the subject matter, the book should also prove valuable to apprentices and mechanics. The author wishes to express his indebtedness to Prof. F. D. Crawshaw...
