Excerpt: . 262 chapter xx. It will be seen from the instructions of Lord Wolseley to Sir H. Stewart and to Sir C. vv. Wilson that the Desert Column was not primarily sent for the relief of Khartum, and that so far, as we have already pointed out, neither his Lordship nor the Chief of his Staff appeared to recognise any immediate or pressing necessity for an armed intervention for that purpose. In further proof of the statements already made on this state of confidence at the Head Quarters of the Expedition, we refer to Lord Wolseley s despatch of January 29th, enelosing one from Sir C. W. Wilson, describing the operations of the Desert Column after the 18th, when, after Sir H. Stewart had been wounded, he had taken command of it: -- The result, Lord Wolsley informed Lord Hartington, of these successfully-executed operations has...
